

iittala Groups' Sorsakoski Cookware factory receives ISO 14001 Certificate of Environmental Management System

iittala Groups' Sorsakoski Cookware factory has received an ISO 14001:2004 Certificate of Environmental Management System. The certificate is valid for the manufacturing of cookware and subcontracting products and it was granted by Det Norske Veritas. The environmental management system is part of the certified quality management system (ISO 9001) of Sorsakoski Cookware factory.

The essential part of the environmental management system is the evaluation of environmental impacts. The system includes activities to develop and carry out an improvement program to manage environmental impacts and to reduce the possible harmful effects. Our aim is that all our factories have the environmental management system, which is valid for certification, in use during 2009 at the latest.
